Special," no doubt induced many to visit the track in the vain hope that perhaps they would see these two great four-year-olds meet.

There was a doubt, however, that the colts would not come together and this was not dispelled until after the third race had been run and Lamplighter's name was put up on the scratch board.

Lamplighter was entered so as to start in case it rained, over a heavy track which would make Lamplighter's chances rosy. The rain held off and so Lamplighter was withdrawn.

The track was in fine condition and the weather, though cloudy and threatening, was warm and pleasant.

The opening event only had four starters, but they were sprinters of known ability. The race was interesting, too, from the fact that Helen Nichols made her reappearance in the East.

The reports concerning her were so

Nichols made her reappearance in the East.

The reports concerning her were so good that she was made a $ to 5 favorite. This price was eagerly seized, and she went to the post a hot favorite at 1 to 2. Prince George was played heavily by those who were not affected by the Helen Nichols glamor. Tormentor and Annie Bishop were only nibbled at.

Helen Nichols's race was not satisfactory. McCafferty took her wide at the head of the stretch, accidentally, perhaps, and though she made up the lost ground, never could catch Prince George, who won easily. Tormentor was third.

The others ran in a beautiful bunch throughout and at the furlong pole half a dezen were stretched across the track in a line, heads apart.

Frog Dance then drew out a trifle, but Rightmore and Figaro challlenged smartly, and a rattling finish resulted in the three finishing heads apart.

Figaro was a warm favorite. Frog Dance was the second choice.

It was 4 A. M. when the big Cunarder poked her nose past Quarantine and dropped anchor to await the Health Officer.

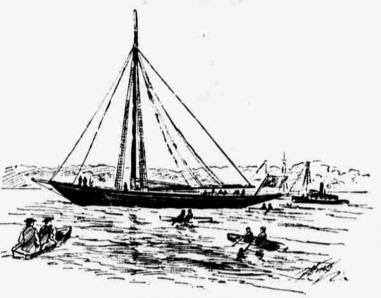

Not until after 6.30 did Dr. Jenkins board her, owing to the presence of numerous other craft awaiting him. Among those which had arrived previously to the Campania was the America.

In answer to a question about the relative qualities of Valkyrie and Britannia.

Lord Dunraven was loyal to the Frince of Wales, and modestly said he thought the yachts were of about equal quality. He also gave it as his opinion that Navahoe hoe and Britannia have about the same qualities, but when this was figured out by a reporter to mean that Navahoe and Valkyrie are equal, he smiled and answered:

"I didn't say so."

Placing his men around the house, Chief Brooks went to the door and knocked. A tail, dark complexioned man responded, and on a signal given by Chief Brooks the officers rushed into the house.

Delnoce and his wife were the only persons found on the premises. Chief Brooks placed them in the custody of his two assistants and searched the house.

In a room on the upper floor he found a complete outfit used by countera complete outfit used by counter-feiters, consisting of presses, plates and Deinace disclaimed all knowledge that they had been illegally used.

Chief Brooks was convinced that he had discovered the nest of a well organized gang of counterfeiters. The two prisoners were escorted to Brooklyn and locked up over night in Raymond Street Jail.

The officers carried along with them the plates and counterfeit paper and today they made another trip to Livingston. They carted away the presses and other paraphernalia and stored them in the Federal building in this city.

When arraigned before Commissioner Bellows the Deinoce couple declined to make any statement in regard to the charge against them.
